

NEW EVIDENCE TO TRACE DISBROW TO BOAT WITH TRAGEDY VICTIMS.

Witnesses Subpoenaed To-Day Will Swear, It Is Alleged, that the Prisoner, "Dimple" Lawrence and Foster Went Out on Tianna Bay Together and that Leaky Skiff Was Only a "Blind"—Flowers Left at Riverhead Jail.

GOOD GROUND, July 5.—District Attorney Smith to-day made public the names of his two new witnesses who, it is declared, will establish that Louis Disbrow, Clarence Foster and "Dimple" Lawrence went out on Tianna Bay in one boat; that this boat was of fairly good size and sound, and that the leaky little skiff found capsized in the bay had been sent adrift later simply as a "blind."

Before Thursday's sensational hearing in the case began a report was current that there were two such witnesses. There was much mystery concerning them, however, which only added to the interest the report awakened in the court-room.

To-day the witnesses were subpoenaed. They are Edward Croker, a son of Fire Chief Croker, who has a summer cottage at Tianna Bay, and Harry Jacobs, a village lad.

Two boats have so far figured in all the stories of the tragedy, which, after investigation by the District Attorney, resulted in the arrest of young Disbrow on the charge of having murdered his rival, Foster, and the object of the rivalry, Miss Lawrence.

One, a small, leaky dingy, hardly capable of holding two persons, belonged to Nelson Squires. The other, a large water-tight sharpie, in which several passengers could be seated with comfort. After the drowning of Foster and Miss Lawrence the smaller boat was found floating in the bay, badly awash, with one oar missing. The larger boat was found the morning after the disappearance of the tragedy victims pulled up on the beach, 100 yards from the spot where it had been on the previous night.

Oars Were Missing.

The leak was damp, the oarlocks showed signs of usage, but the oars were missing. Footprints led from the boat to the Turrell House. Not until Pinkerton Detective Fields arrived, following the finding of the bodies of Foster and Miss Lawrence, was any attention paid to the importance of the boat as a solution to the mystery.

From John Caschid, a fisherman who had charge of the dingy, Fields learned that the boat was so leaky two persons could not have sat in it without sinking it immediately. From Harry Jacobs and young Croker, who discovered the boat, he learned that the oarlocks which had been tied to the seat, had not been disturbed.

They were still tied up when the boat was found. Carter said he had tied up the boat. Therefore it had not been washed out into the bay. Neither was the rope broken, and these footprints hanging beneath the seat. The matter of the oarlocks, apparently an insignificant circumstance, proves that no one went out in the boat.

Showed a Struggle.

As for the larger boat, Frederick Squires fixed its location on the beach the night of the tragedy. Footprints of a woman and two men were found about the spot, and these footprints indicated there had been a struggle. Though there were footprints of three persons about the spot where the boat had been moored, the footprints of only one person were found leading away from the spot, one hundred yards up the beach, where the sharpie had been pulled ashore. District Attorney Smith says he is prepared to prove that these are the footprints of Louis Disbrow.

Flowers for Disbrow.

Detective Fields took an unexpected trip to the Turrell House early to-day to investigate a report that the proprietor, Edward Turrell, would testify in favor of Louis Disbrow at Monday's hearing. After his visit the detective was rather reticent. He said, however, that he believed Turrell's testimony would be exactly as the prosecution expected.

"I have no doubt as to the result of the hearing next week," said Fields. "By next Saturday, I believe, the guilt of Disbrow will be so strongly shown that no one can even doubt it."

A rumor has gained some circulation that if Disbrow goes on the stand in his own behalf he may plead "self-defense." A big bouquet of field daisies, wild

But "Putnam Bradley" Avows that He Is Not the Man Named in Suit.

Among the judgments officially recorded this week was one in favor of T. Kirkpatrick, the Fifth Avenue jeweler, against "P. B. Strong" for $300.

Putnam Bradley Strong, whose round-the-world escapade with May Yohle led him to resign his commission as major in the army and retire from society, says he is so sure no judgment has been secured against him.

Major Strong spent yesterday with Max Yohle, or Lady Hope, or Frau Strong, as she has been variously called, and with Mrs. Eliza Yohle, her mother, and the Japanese maid, Mona Kasaki, in the Japanese apartment, and the toy terrier, and the pair of parakeets, which were all included in the Strong ménage when the daisy moved into his present quarters at Hastings-on-the-Hudson last spring.

roses and buttercups were left at the Riverhead jail to-day for Disbrow. The donors of the bouquet—a crowd of "summer girls" on the way to the golf links—left no names. Disbrow did not get the bouquet.

In accordance with orders from Lawyer Miles, Warden Rufford allows no messages, letters or packages to be taken to the prisoner. Many letters are received for Disbrow, but all are kept unopened for the attorney.

Disbrow still maintains a stolid calm. He spends most of his time smoking and reading. In appearance he has aged five years. When he gave his age at the jail last Monday as twenty-seven, it was hardly credited. He looked barely twenty-three. To-day he appeared more than thirty. Warden Madden, who saw Motteux in the Tomb, says he believes Disbrow will prove to have as splendid a nerve as the accused slayer of Mrs. Adams.

"SAINTS" AWAIT SAVIOUR'S COMING

Gathering of Religious Enthusiasts at Binghamton, Where a Handsome House Has Been Rented by Them.

(Special to The Evening World.)

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 5.—A gathering of "Saints" is in session at No. 91 Walnut street, awaiting the second coming of the Saviour, which is, they believe, near at hand. Among the places represented by delegations are Brooklyn, Cleveland, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Ottawa, Montreal, and St. Louis.

No. 91 Walnut street is a handsome residence that has been leased by the "Saints" until Sunday evening, or before which time the anticipated manifestation is expected to take place. The house is furnished principally with chairs, on which the "Saints" await events. Lawn services are held in the front of the house for the benefit of all who desire to join.

The "Saints" do not belong to any denomination and disclaim connection with Second Adventism.

J. M. Waterbury Arrives on La Lorraine—French Liner Mistook Smoke for Burning Ship—Philadelphia in, Too.

J. M. Waterbury, the polo player, returned from Europe to-day on the French liner La Lorraine. He appeared in excellent health and brought with him a big assortment of polo mallets.

Mr. Waterbury was in a hurry to get to his hotel—the Holland House. He said he wouldn't speak for publication because he hadn't time.

His only thing of interest that transpired during the trip of La Lorraine was the sighting of what seemed to be a burning vessel on Thursday. Mr. A. H. Smith, captain of the steamship, headed for the cloud of smoke, from which flames dashed intermittently. After getting within four or five miles it was seen that the smoke and flame came from the funnels of a big steamship. Neither its name nor this could be ascertained.

Among the passengers were Frederick Brown, John H. Bell, C. J. Collier, F. Burnside Foster and S. R. Reishman.

The American liner Philadelphia, to-day taking the polo player, returned to New York, celebrated the Fourth of July with athletic sports, firing a national salute and concerts in the afternoon and evening.

On the Philadelphia were J. T. H. Atwater, W. J. Baird, Col. C. J. Zeller, Count A. S. Korzevski, Washington B. Thompson, R. M. Thompson, G. S. Brewster, Capt. Vincent, Everett B. Webster and Capt. Joseph Wheeler.

Minneapolis, known as the "school teacher ship," kept up its name by taking away twenty-seven women teachers from Pittsburgh, Pa., to-day.

J. W. Osborne, the assistant District Attorney, also sailed on the Minneapolis.

HOUSES LIKELY TO FALL.

The Building Department notified the police to-day that the old rookeries bordering on the Stryker farm, where the work of constructing the new West Side Park is going on, were in an unsafe condition, and that the house No. 61 West Fifty-fourth street was likely to tumble down at any moment.

The contractors were also notified, and workmen were set immediately to work to shore up the house.

Nelson, Who Had Marvellous Escape from Instant Death, Will Probably Die, Doctors at Hospital Say.

With his head crushed in and suffering from severe internal injuries, Charles Nelson, thirty-five years old, a track repairer employed by the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company, lies at the point of death in Roosevelt Hospital.

Nelson, with two other men, was repairing the tracks on the Ninth Avenue branch of the system between Fifth and Fifty-first streets. A southbound Harlem express was about to pass them and they got out of the way. Nelson climbed onto a pile of three or four logs, which timbered the fell from where he was standing directly in front of the engine, which crossed him to one side onto the southbound local track.

Nelson lay on the track unconscious, while a southbound train was approaching. Fortunately the engineer had seen Nelson's body thrown on the track and he was able to stop.

At the hospital, where Nelson was taken it was said that he would probably die. He lives at No. 27 Shaffer place, Brooklyn.

Young Motte Gets One Licking for It and Four More Await Him.

WATERBURY, N. Y., July 5.—Relying upon the veracity of young John Motte, because his father was a layman, the mothers of four boys living in Keyes avenue believed his story rather than their own sons', and punished their boys because Motte told a straight-told story of how the four boys had kidnapped him, nailed him up in a barrel covered with a screen, and left him all day in piteous plight in the pouring rain.

Motte had been away all day and when he arrived home at night he was muddy and soaking wet. He told his mother and she believed him. He connected the kidnapping story in order to explain his bedraggled condition. In reality he had spent the day fishing and had fallen in the Black River.

Even after the alleged kidnappers had been punished they stuck to their story of kidnapping. Motte was taken to the hospital with such persistence that their parents investigated and learned that the Maddy boy had been seen fishing on the river that day. Confronted with this evidence young Motte broke down and confessed that his wild tale of abduction and kidnapping was an invention.

Last night it was Motte's turn for a whipping at home, and four more are said to await him the next time he appears in Keyes avenue.

TOY ROAD TREASURER GONE.

Police Asked to Find Man Who Rins Away with Day's Receipts.

George C. Tillyou today asked the police of Queens Borough to send out a patrol to look for a man who was said to be rinsing away with the day's receipts of the miniature railway at Rockaway beach on Monday and Tuesday.

The man, who said he was William Andrews, applied on the morning of the Fourth for employment and was appointed treasurer of the toy railroad. The traffic was heavy all day and $10 was collected in fares from the children. But Treasurer Andrews disappeared with the cash, and from papers and a key left behind by him. It is believed that Andrews was an assumed name.

At the colliery a large force of guards is posted and the company has been turning away applicants for work, including many miners.

Delaware and Hudson and the Lehigh Valley Coal companies are also busy with preparations which make it appear as if the time understood by the operators each company will try to deal the strikers a crushing blow.

MISS ETHEL DAVIES TO WED.

NEWPORT, July 5.—A wedding that will interest the fashionable world will be that of Miss Ethel Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Davies, and Miss Bradley Martin, a friend of Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

The ceremony is set for Aug. 9 at noon in the St. John's Memorial Chapel. The reception which will follow will be held at Feneston, near Middleton, the Darvill family residence.

Miss Davies is a great favorite in society. She is a beautiful girl, a niece of Bradley Martin and a friend of Mrs. John Jacob Astor.

RAN THROUGH HOUSE A LIVING TORCH

Mrs. Guillon, a Widow, Probably Fatally Burned When Clothes Caught Fire from Lamp.

Mrs. Marguerite Guillon, a French widow, fifty-three years of age, was taken from her home at No. 153 West Twenty-sixth street, early this morning to New York Hospital, dying from horrible burns resulting from the explosion of a lamp in her hands.

The widow Guillon lived with her grown-up children, Susan, Mary and Victor, on the second floor of the five-story house at No. 153 West Twenty-sixth street. They were all employed. In accordance with her custom the mother arose at 5 o'clock to prepare breakfast. The small night lamp exploded in her hand, scattering its burning oil all over her clothing. Awakened by her screams, her children ran out of their rooms just in time to see their mother run from the flat a flaming torch. The frenzied woman plunged down the stairs, screaming with pain.

Charles Staub, a seventeen-year-old youth, living on the floor below, saw her, and grabbing a blanket off his bed, intercepted her. He held her blanket about her. Her children following her with blankets added them to the wrappings, and extinguished the flames. Meantime the house was afire above in the room where the lamp exploded. All the dozen families of French people who live in the building were rushing about, screaming, groaning and otherwise exhibiting their panic-stricken condition.

Mrs. Staub put out the fire with buckets of water, and a policeman summoned an ambulance from New York Hospital. But Dr. Luddington said that Mrs. Guillon's burns were certainly fatal, and that her death must come in a few hours. He did what he could to allay the terror suffering and took her to the hospital to die.

NIGHT CHASE FOR RIVER PIRATES.

Policemen Fire Shots on Two Men, One of Whom Is Captured—Other Dives and Gets Away.

Policemen Olsen, Casey and McPartland, told in the Lower Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day the story of an exciting night chase after alleged river pirates in which shots were exchanged. One of the fugitives dived overboard and got away and the other was being clung to the stern of his boat with all his hands and face submerged.

The prisoner was James Mahoney, thirty-seven years old, of No. 10 Dykeman street, Brooklyn. He and his brother were arrested a year ago and accused of having stolen a large quantity of coffee on the river, but they were never convicted.

Late last night the three policemen were cruising about near the Brooklyn terminal of the Fulton Ferry in their launch when they saw two men in a rowboat who they thought, clung suspiciously. They gave chase, and as the men did not stop they turned their launch and fired twelve shots.

As the police launch drew nearer and the rowboat men saw them, they dived overboard. One disappeared in the darkness. The other was found in the water clinging to the stern of the launch. He was dragged aboard the launch and in the boat was found 2,000 yards from the shore.

The police men say they believe it was stolen from Martin's store.

OPERATORS READY TO RESUME WORK

Claim to Have Enough Men to Start Mining Hard Coal Next Week—Activity on Railroads.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 5.—The movement of empty coal cars along the railroads and the unusual activity about several of the collieries in this region indicate that an effort is to be made in a few days to start work.

The operators assert that they have sufficient men under promise. While they will not admit that work may be resumed next week, there is a general belief that the effort will be made.

In the Hazleton region the Pardees are expected to mass men at the Harwood colliery, which, being on the outskirts of the region, is in less danger of the strike.

A number of miners are understood to have applied for work in response to the notice of the collieries that it was ready to receive applications.

Point to a resumption of work at the Sautter No. 5 colliery of the Susquehanna Coal Company. The mine is situated at the edge of the Wyoming basin and its output goes over the Pennsylvania Railroad to a distribution point that does not again approach the mine.

At the colliery a large force of guards is posted and the company has been turning away applicants for work, including many miners.

Delaware and Hudson and the Lehigh Valley Coal companies are also busy with preparations which make it appear as if the time understood by the operators each company will try to deal the strikers a crushing blow.

Otto Keppler Has Concussion of the Brain as Result of Trick.

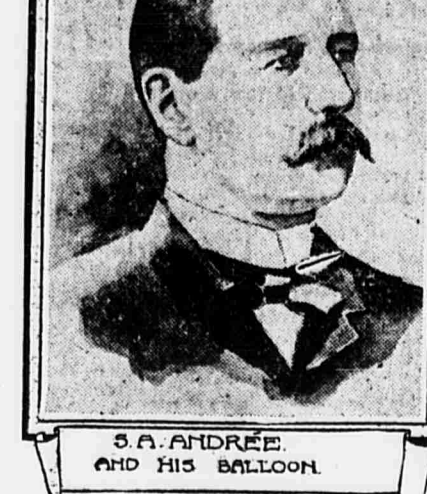

Otto Keppler, of No. 52 Monitor street, Williamsburg, is lying in St. Catherine's Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and many painful burns as the result of the Fourth of July playfulness of some of his friends in the Williamsburg Social Club.

Keppler is twenty-one and a serious youth, and some of the choice spirits of the organization thought it would be a great joke to make their fellow-member laugh. So they loaded a big cannon to the muzzle and put it in the room where he sat alone reading, touched it off. The cannon exploded and pieces of the brass struck Keppler on the head. The walls of the room were badly damaged.

Louis Zuckerman, twenty-seven years old, of No. 72 West Broadway street, was arrested, and this morning was released in the New York Court.

ANDREE SLAIN IN NORTH; PROOF OF DEATH FOUND.

Missionary Sees Relics of Explorer's Expedition—Killed by Savage Esquimaux.

S. A. ANDREE AND HIS BALLOON.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 5.—The first definite news confirming the killing of Prof. Andree and his companions, Strindberg and Frakel, by savage Esquimaux, was brought to this city to-day by Rev. Richard Farier, an Anglican minister at Fort Churchill, the northernmost post of the Hudson Bay Company.

Rev. Mr. Farier says that relics of Andree, clothing and scientific instruments which completely establish the identity of the Arctic balloon explorer, were brought to the post three weeks prior to his departure on June 1.

"The report sent out by Dr. A. D. Alston two years ago was correct," said Rev. Farier. Mr. Alston was in charge of the post and a responsible person. However, the Hudson Bay people, and particularly Mr. Alston, got into trouble over the previous report, and they do not care to have anything further to say.

Killed by Three Tribes.

"As an inmate of the post, I know that the report was brought in that Andree and his companions were killed by a tribe of fierce Esquimaux between two and three hundred miles northwest of our post. It is a positive fact that the 'huskie' sent out from the post to confirm the report, has returned to the fort, bringing with him two pipes and parts of scientific instruments. The 'huskie' told me that he had obtained the relics from members of his tribe.

"The story of the killing, as he learned it from his people, was that three white men out shooting deer came upon a party of Esquimaux. The latter took the report of the firearms for a hostile sign, and they discharged their arrows at the white men. The latter returned the fire, but two of them fell wounded by arrows, and the third was pierced as he ran away. Then the savage Esquimaux fell upon them and literally chopped them to pieces with their harpoons."

Relics May Arrive Soon.

Mr. Farier says that the relics of Andree's party brought into Fort Churchill will probably reach civilization with the next mail from the far North. He says that a persistent search for further relics of the party has been prosecuted by the Hudson Bay Company, so far without success.

Reports of Andree's death by savage natives in the frozen wilds of Northern Canada have been sitting down to civilization for three years. Ashton Alston, of London, on Aug. 1, 1898, wrote his uncle, Rear-Admiral Campbell, of London, on Aug. 1, 1898, the story of the killing, which is confirmed by Rev. Farier in the above despatch. He said the killing was a tragedy named 'Stocky' who heard the story from Esquimaux hunters. They asked him to go with them to where the balloons lay stocked with tobacco and provisions.

Mrs. Hetty Green, the wealthiest celebrity at Rockaway, has taken part in several social functions at the Elmhurst Hotel since her arrival. The most important event of the season in which she is to figure has not taken place—but it will.

William S. Devery is going to call on her. Mrs. Green has read a lot about the former Chief of Police and his expressed desire to become a business man, feels a natural desire to make the acquaintance of the smartest business woman in the world.

"If it is true, as I have been informed," said the former Chief to-day, "that Mrs. Green would like to see me I will call on her. I'm an old resident of Rockaway Beach, and I guess it's my place to call around and welcome as distinguished a new arrival as Mrs. Green."

"I suppose you will talk business with her," suggested the reporter.

"I don't approve of talking shop when passing social calls," said Mr. Devery. "But if she wants to know anything about New York real estate as a medium for investment, I can tell her a thing or two that may be of interest. They tell me she doesn't go much for real estate, but puts her money in bonds."

In his opinion, New York real estate beats all the ponds ever printed.

Over 700 Employees of the Metropolitan Company Are Spending the Day at College Point.

As the result of the annual outing of the conductors and motormen of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, patrons of that corporation on the Lexington avenue, Sixth Avenue and Broadway lines had to wait longer to-day for cars to take them to their destinations. Early this morning 746 conductors and motormen from the Broadway, Lexington and Sixth Avenue lines, with their families, boarded a steamer lying at the foot of West Fifth street and started for the picnic grounds at College Point.

The employees of the Broadway line, comprising 216 men, wore a uniform consisting of white trousers, negligee shirt of white and black, and white cap with a black peak.

In order that the men could have a holiday the number of cars on the lines has been reduced and the men working to-day will remain on duty longer than usual.

MAY SUE CITY FOR WOMAN'S ARREST.

Relatives of Miss Corlis, of Brooklyn, Say that She Was Sent to Asylum by Magistrate Without Cause.

Suits for damages against the city of New York and Police Magistrate John Nauman are threatened by relatives of Miss Katherine Corlis, an aged woman who lives with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Rose Corlis, in Windsor Terrace, Brooklyn.

Miss Corlis was confined in jail and in the Kings County Insane Asylum in spite of her relatives' protest that she suffered from nothing but an impediment in her speech.

Miss Corlis went to Holy Cross Cemetery two weeks ago, and returning home became confused and lost her way. A policeman picked her up, and as she could not make herself understood she was taken to the Kings County Insane Asylum. She was there for several days, but has since been ill because of her exposure.

When Mrs. Corlis located her sister, she claims, the Magistrate refused to order her release. The woman was sent back to the Kings County Insane Asylum. The matter, and she was turned out in the rain last Sunday. She was her way home, but has since been ill because of her exposure.

BROKER ED BELL TYPHOID VICTIM.

Ex-Park Commissioner, Who Was Stricken in Saratoga, in a Critical Condition—Now at His Home.

Edward Bell, ex-Park Commissioner and until last November a prominent member of the Stock Exchange, is ill with typhoid fever at the Hotel Netherlands, and his physician, Dr. Albert H. Ely, of No. 47 West Fifty-sixth street, says that he is in a critical condition.

Mr. Bell was at the United States Hotel in Saratoga, N. Y., when he was taken sick. The physicians who then attended him diagnosed the case as malaria. Mr. Bell continued to grow worse until it was decided to bring him to this city, and on Sunday night, June 22, William C. Whitney brought Mr. Bell to this city in a private car. In the meantime Dr. Ely was telephoned to meet Mr. Bell.

At the time her husband was taken ill, Mrs. Bell, who was Miss Helen A. Willmerding, was at Pomfret, Conn., where her youngest son, Harold W. Bell, is preparing for college. Edward Bell, who is a "soph" at Harvard, and his mother were telegraphed for, and Mrs. Bell and her son, with Dr. Ely, have been constant attendants at the bedside.

Mr. Bell is a son of the late Isaac Bell, who for several years was a Commissioner of Charities and Correction and one of the originators of the Riot Relief Fund. Edward Bell was a School Trustee in the Twelfth Ward in 1892, and because of that appointment declined a nomination for the Assembly that year. He was appointed a School Commissioner in April 23, 1893, the youngest man to hold the position in the history of the city, and in April, 1894, was made Park Commissioner by Mayor Gilroy. He was the Tammany broker for election betting last year.
